In other words, there is evidently a cat concealed in the meal tub. If Gov. Brown has known all along that the lessees were behind the large sum that he says they owe, why has he not brought suit; against them? They are perfectly solvent and if the questions can not be settled otherwise, the courts should pass upon them. The legislature is not the proper place for contracts to be construed and the questions would not have been brought thefore it but for the petty jealousies that exist among the State officers at Frankfort. It is claimed that the secret of Gov. Brown's hostility to the lessees was occasioned by the fact that they supported Watt Hardin for governor, but surely he is a man of a larger calibre than to permit himself to be governed by revenge in a matter so important to the State and people.

BROUGHT TO HER SENSES.

Some Old Love Letters and Their Effect cr Two Young Lives.

"Greg, are you awake?" calls a tumbled heap of femininity upon the sofa. "I am.

And a wreath of cigarette smoke floats above a masculine head lying comfortably amid a heap of cushions in the big armchair.

"I've just come across these old letters in my desk. I'm going to read them

"I'm at your mercy." "I'll poke up the fire first. I want And through all one's brain more light. There! Just listen to this Goes a sense of pain,

"MY OWN DEAREST GREGORY-For the last As in harmony with the mouraful strain, time I write you thus. Yes, it must indeed be so. It has all been a happy, foolish dream, but now it must end. Today I release you from our engagement. A marriage between us would be engagement. A marriage between us would be most ridiculous. "We are both so very young-too young to de eide so important a matter. Mamma says so, What life but hath its tears? So sweeter and I am sure she is right. We have had a long What were the sunshine but for the shade? talk. Besides your salary has proved itself too small for one.

"Now, dear friend, do nothing rash. Men do not die of love. Your life is not your own, so no experiments with laudanum. Do not come Through cloudy day or night clear breaking, to see me. My mind is fully made up. I shall travel with dear mamma and see more of this great world than I have hitherto known.

"Now write me a nice letter and tell me that I am a very sensible girl. Be brave; no nonsense. And remember that I am ever your de-LUCY."

"That was a nice letter to read when a fellow was hungry!" "Did you receive it before dinner? I might have known you did by your hateful answer. Here it is: "My DEAR LUCY-You are indeed a sensible girl, and I am proud of my little friend's judgment. You always were a trump. My mind is much relieved by your decision. I have often thought that perhaps we were a trifle foolish,

"I didn't like to say so myself, though. "You will pardon the brief character of this note when I tell you that Tom Wayland is waiting for me. We are just off to the club to

"By the way, that report in regard to his sister's engagement is false. She told me so herself this afternoon. And now goodby, little kitten. Be happy, but of course you will. It is the warm wish of your friend, GREGORY.

Silence. "What a villain you were!" A sigh. A chuckle from amid the cigarette smoke.

"What fools girls are!" from the sofa. "'Tis easy to forgive them for it-as long as they're pretty. Go on. Read your answer."

She reads: "SIR-I have heard before of the transient nature of man's love, but allow me to assure you that I have found yours more ephemeral than any yet on record.

Interpolated chuckle from the big armchair and vigorous responses of "Wretch!" from sofa. Resumes letter: "As for Miss Wayland, I am glad somebody finds so much to admire about her. The poor thing never had any attention before. I hope you may both be happy."

Voice from armchair, "She was a beauty." Voice from sofa, "She was horrid-great, big, ugly thing!" "Go on. "Hum! Where was I? Oh, here."

Reads: "As for my mother, she inherits her worldliness. I have not spoken to her today. And now goodby-what a word! May you forget the ruin you have wrought in a young girl's heart! I shall pray for you always. May death

How He Knew.

Before the fish commissioners of California decided to stock the streams of the state with that much despised but powerful fish, the German carp, they were greatly concerned as to whether it would live in certain waters. The question was debated at several meetings and was finally submitted to Professor H --- , an eminent authority.

Samples of the water were obtained and turned over to the professor, who in a short time submitted a favorable report, and the carp were accordingly turned loose in the rivers.

The commissioners were greatly impressed by the professor's knowledge, but one of them had a question to ask. you?" he inquired.

INTO EACH LIFE SOME RAIN MUST FALL.

"Into each life ?" Aye, even so, Clouds must gather; or swift or slow, And the bluest sky be darkened soon By the thunder clouds crossing the busy noon, But, blessings on the rain ! Freshness and beauty come in its train, And though the drops fall, Glory and sunshine follow them all.

The clouds that have no rain Are the darkest and coldest, most sad and drear Most dull and gray, with no promise of cheer, Silence and gloom are in their train And the wind moans wearily,

A wail it has caught from a restless sea, On whose breast a storm sits brooding,

A saddest interluding The fading lite wherein no rain doth full.

What life but hath its tears ? So sweeter made. A weary monotony that will not fade. We mourn our changes, but they are Shining far off, may be, but still shining, As in rebuke most sweet of our repining.

Behold, the ritted clouds are taking Their silent night, and with them go our fears. Shines not the sun the brighter for the rain ? Is not the grass more green, more golden-hued the grain ?

And who shall dare to say that through our lives There runneth not the same analogy ? For unto each and all of us arrives The same old change of sunshine and of cloud From cradle unto snowy shroud.
